YATES—RANDOLPH.

The two younger sons of the first Rev. Bartholomew Yates married sisters—daughters of Edward Randolph, the seventh and youngest son of William Randolph, of Turkey Island, and Mary Isham, his wife. Their line of descent, therefore, is a part of the history of the Randolph family. These brothers were, like their father and elder brother, themselves of the Colonial Church, and to obtain their clerical orders had to visit England. On these visits they were married, their wives being natives and residents of England. Their father is somewhere called Edward Randolph of Bremono, but it is very certain that he never had a family seat in Virginia. His father's will, dated March 6, 1709, probated in Henrico county court, at Varina, June 1, 1713, devised him a tract of 625 acres on Chickahominy Swamp. While the location of this tract is not known, it was very certainly not "Bremo," for that name belonged to a farm on the James river near Turkey Island and Malvern Hill, which was, during the 18th century, the property of the Cocke family.—3 Va. Hist. Mag., 405, &c.

Edward Randolph was born about 1700, and was a boy in his teens when his father died. He chose a seafaring life, and traded in his own vessels between Virginia and the mother country, and is spoken of in the Dinwiddie Papers as late as 1756 as being then in Virginia preparing for a return voyage to England. When and where he died is not known, but it is believed he never had a home in Virginia. The MSS. notes of John Randolph of Roanoke, in possession of Rev. C. B. Bryan, of Hampton, has this record :

7. Edward (who lived in England), captain of a ship, captivated at a launch at Gravesend Miss Groves, an heiress of £10,000, whom he married, and had—

1. Joseph, died unmarried.
2. Edward, married Miss Lucy Harrison, of Berkeley, sister to Governor Harrison and Mrs. Speaker Randolph, by whom he had Harrison (married, first, Miss Starke, by whom he had Edward and Lucy, and secondly, Miss Jones, of Brunswick). Lucy married Mons. Latil, of France.
3. Eliz., married the Rev. Wm. Yates, of Gloucester.
4. Mary, married Rev. Robert Yates—two daughters married in England.

Bishop Meade, following this record, gives Mrs. Randolph's maiden name as Groves, and it has been so accepted. But her name was Grosvenor. The older members of the writer's family, who were contemporary with his grandmother, who was a granddaughter of Mrs. Randolph, always gave this name, associating it with the Grosvenor family and Grosvenor Square ; and an old aunt, a childless widow and the repository of all family traditions and heirlooms, and an almost daily companion of her mother for fifty years, urged the giving of this name to the writer's youngest brother to preserve it in the family history. She always spoke of Mrs. Randolph as an heiress, and either a Quakeress or of Quaker sympathies, and so much opposed to negro slavery that she was never willing to come to Virginia.
